“Building a problem” is a line from a song on dodie’s first studio album. She found herself with a bit of a problem because she’d already named her previous EP Human, and the songs she found herself writing for the album really added up to the same idea; the flawed, emotionally erratic, wondrously complex conundrum that is being alive – and Human was taken.

At just 25, dodie has already made a lot of living. Some of that has played out on camera as she made a name for herself as a singer and writer online, amassing millions of fans with her disarmingly honest videos and affecting, intimate singing style.

With over 200 million plays on Spotify this promises to be a night of great pop music!

Parquet Courts is an American rock band from New York City. The band consists of Andrew Savage, Austin Brown, Sean Yeaton, and Max Savage.

Their blend of noisy, punk-friendly clatter & snarky, sometimes-serious lyrics delivered in a menacing monotone struck a chord in indie rock circles with their 2012 album, Light Up Gold, and after loads of touring and a series of literate and scrappy albums made for What's Yr Rupture? and Rough Trade they firmly established themselves as one of their era's marquee groups. As the decade advanced, the band began to experiment with their proven single, collaborating with Italian producer Daniele Luppi on 2017s Milano, and exploring new influences (dance punk, new wave) on the Danger its 2021 follow-up, Sympathy for Life.

Currently on an EU + USA tour, we’re delighted to be one of the stops for Parquet Courts!
